

NEVER take ANTS for granted

By Bobbie K Meneses

Without question, there are so many pests that bring untold complications and dilemmas to us. However, when it comes to ranking them from the worst to the least troublesome, the ant seems the popular choice for being the least of our problems. Ants are the safest of the lot and probably why it is not taken seriously. Most of us will not bother to call for help should we discover that we have an ant infestation problem. It is understandable because we are confident we can remove ants ourselves.

Are we right in taking the ants for granted? That is the question we should ask ourselves. Based on its appearance and how easy we could squeeze them with our fingers, we are probably right. On the surface that is, but what we have failed to consider is how relentless and resilient ants are. Yes, ten ants, twenty ants, even a hundred ants, it is not much of a problem. A simple spray of insecticides and they are all gone, just like that. But did it occur to you that the ants are doing just like that to put us into a false sense of security?

Perhaps, this easy-going attitude we have of ants has made it possible for them to endure and become stronger.

Ants may not have as much thinking prowess as we have, but do not underestimate their uncanny instinct because it has served them well. When we go on our extermination binge, undeniably we get to kill a lot of ants and in the process the ants vanish. We congratulate ourselves not realizing that the ants are just biding their time because their instincts tell them to back off. Once their instincts tell them it's safe once more, the ants will be back again. Again we repeat the process, two times, three times, countless of times and still the ants keeps coming back. By this time, they have even tripled in numbers. Reluctantly, you now accept the fact that ants are not as safe as they seem to appear. Ants are resilient as and they are not daunted by ordinary extermination treatment. What you need now is help from a qualified ant pest control company to truly get rid of the ants.

The next time you see ants building up in your home, don't take it for granted. Act swiftly before the infestation becomes much worse.

An experienced pest control company recognizes and respect the toughness and obstinacy of ants. They come equipped with the right kind of equipment, knowledge and mentality in going after the ants' right next to their lair, to purge and exterminate it. They have studied the ways of these tiny insects and know how to effectively exterminate them. You will be surprise at the means they go into to insure that the ant infestation are dead on its tracks.

The next time you see ants building up in your home, don't take it for granted. Act swiftly before the infestation becomes much worse.

Call for the help of a qualified pest control specialist and stop the infestation before it has any chance of increasing. If you have no experience in getting rid of pest or you are trying to save a few bucks, forget it. In the end, you might be spending much more than you bargained for if you do it yourself. Trust the professionals on this one and not be disappointed.

